Johnson Aide Quits Job for Greener Fields

CPYRIGHT

~~McGeorge Bundy was the 41-year-old dean of the Harvard University faculty of arts and sciences in 1961 when he went to the White House to advise President Kennedy on foreign affairs. He performed valuable services for President Kennedy and for President Johnson, acting chiefly as co-ordinator of reports and proposals from the State Department, the Defense Department, the Central Intelligence Agency and the Atomic Energy Commission. He would present his recommendations on such matters to~~ ~~the President. His influence in both~~ Kennedy and Johnson Administrations has been considerable. Now Mr. Bundy has resigned his White House post to become president of the Ford Foundation, the world's largest philanthropic organization. He wrote President Johnson that he left the government job "with great regret," but the compulsion behind his resignation is not hard to appreciate. His federal pay was $28,500. He reportedly will receive $75,000 from the Ford Foundation.
